

At Bell Nunnally, our extensive litigation and transactional experience enables us to assist construction industry clients in negotiating, drafting and documenting favorable contract terms, while at the same time anticipating pitfalls before they occur.

Bell Nunnally's construction attorneys regularly represent parties in a wide range of roles throughout the industry, from contractors and architects to owners and end users. Setting our clients up for success, we help businesses, partnerships and joint ventures establish their entities and maintain good governance practices. We assist with project finance and commercial contracts, as well as labor and employment, immigration and other operational issues facing construction industry clients.

Construction Claims and Litigation

Our litigation team represents clients in a wide variety of construction-related claims and litigation. We regularly represent clients in cases involving commercial claims, construction defects, and personal injury claims arising from construction defects. With our experience working with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), we have a proven record of successful outcomes in cases involving workplace accidents related to construction defects or product liability. In Texas, we have extensive experience handling cases involving public owners, including bonded projects, which are governed by specific laws.

- Represented property owners, contractors and services providers in construction defect cases.
- Represented construction creditors in both trials and appeals based on promissory notes, leases, guarantees and unpaid accounts.
- Recovered collateral and foreclosed liens for secured construction creditors.
- Perfected and foreclosed both mechanic's and materialman's lien claims and payment bond claims for the contractors and suppliers working on private, state and federal projects.
