Overview:

We are all facing an unprecedented time in our lives and in our businesses due to the coronavirus pandemic. Many of you, maybe for the first time, are dusting off your contracts and looking for force majeure clauses, and wondering whether such terms apply to the outbreak of COVID19 — for your company and for your customers. The business community at large is now faced with a new reality and an evolving legal landscape. With customers slow paying or not paying at all, perfecting your legal rights, under your contracts, statutorily or otherwise, will be more important than ever. Learning how to manage defaulting accounts from a payment and cash flow basis will be essential. Join attorney Karen Hart to understand how COVID-19 will impact your business and how you and your company need to plan.
