Attorney Spencer C. Diebel has joined Bell Nunnally as partner and member of its Real Estate practice.

With more than a decade of experience, Diebel focuses on helping clients navigate the complexities of financing, leasing, acquisition, disposition and development. Working in industries including real estate, financial services and hospitality, he frequently handles 1031 exchange transactions and works closely with local government representatives to help ensure real estate development projects move forward seamlessly.

"Thanks to Spencer's wise guidance, several notable real estate projects and deals have come together for clients, helping them to achieve their own business goals," said Christopher B. Trowbridge, Bell Nunnally managing partner. "His detail-oriented approach and emphasis on client communication set him apart in a competitive field. We're thrilled to expand our real estate team, and we are confident Bell Nunnally will serve as a fantastic platform for Spencer to continue to grow his practice."

Exemplary of his work, Diebel has represented: a publicly traded REIT in several build-to-suit projects that were landlord financed; a regional developer in obtaining construction financing for several mixed-use projects in high growth areas; a datacenter developer in several development projects, including negotiating the construction financing for datacenters in multiple states; and a multifamily developer in negotiating their acquisition loans.
